

Destination Pretty: Carneros Inn and Spa – Napa Valley, California

I have Napa on the brain and weighing heavily on my mind. I recently had lunch with my friend Marty and she reinforced that we need to visit soon. I was watching the Barefoot Contessa (Ina Garten) cook for her beloved Jeffrey in Napa Valley and San Francisco I got a little jealous. That needs to be me. This only added fuel to the fire on planning a Napa Valley sojourn. I figured I could grab a few other couples, rent a house, and pretend that I live in all that Northern California glory. It also means that the girls and I could steal a few hours away from the boys and luxuriate in everything The Carneros Inn has to offer including the spa. The inn is located on acres of vineyards, farmland, and ambiance. I can still visit the spa for the day even if I don't stay at the property, but a stay is a must. Are you reading this husband?

{Hello, old friend. Excited to meet you.}

{I need a massage with this view}

{Let's inhale and exhale for a moment shall we?}

{Truly farm-to-table}

{To market, to market}

{I see sweet sleep in my future}

{Let's take a dip during the day}

{and at dusk}

{Wine and dine me}

{Perfect for a night cap}
